

Getting the cottage right

Jason Choi

Two minutes, promise. We'd rather ask than guess. Skip anything that doesn't apply — and since this arrives by email, answer however is easiest: fill in the lines here, or just list things in your reply. The lines aren't a limit.

Food & kitchen

Any dietary restrictions or food allergies?

Anything you'd like waiting in the fridge when you arrive? (We'll stock it a day or two ahead.)

Snacks — name your poison, be specific, brands welcome:

Fruit you actually eat:

Drinks

Still / sparkling water, soda, energy drinks, lemonade, kombucha — what do you want on hand?

Tea drinker? Tell us what kind and we'll have it there:

The welcome basket

A welcome basket will be waiting for you — on us. If you drink, tell us your bottle and we'll have it waiting. If not, tell us what you'd rather find instead:

And since it's legal here, if the herb is more your speed: indica, sativa, or either? Edibles, flower, or both?

Comfort

Any allergies or sensitivities for linens, pillows, or soaps (feathers, fragrance, detergents)?

Company

Bringing family or a friend? We'll set the cottage up accordingly:

If a kid's coming: anything we should have ready, and would a few hours of childcare be useful?

If you're around beyond the show and want a local to point you at the good spots — beaches, food, the non-tourist stuff — say the word:

Anything we didn't think to ask about — add it to your reply. That's what the email is for.
